TomTom extends HP partnership with new HP iPAQ hx2110 navigation pack

1 March 2005, UK TomTom, Europe's leading personal and in-car navigation solution provider, today announced it is extending its HP partnership with the new TomTom / HP iPAQ hx2110 Pocket PC bundle .

The award-winning TomTom Navigation software provides users with a comprehensive yet easy-to-use in-car GPS navigation solution that turns the HP iPAQ hx2110 PDA into a personal navigation assistant and ensures users get to appointments as quickly as possible.

"TomTom has had great success with earlier HP models and this latest partnership strengthens our market-leading status within the personal navigation industry," said Harold Goddijn, chief executive officer of TomTom. "By providing our Navigation software with the HP iPAQ hx2110 even more PDA users can benefit from GPS navigation and it makes planning your route and getting to your appointment on time easier than ever before."

The TomTom HP Navigation Pack includes great features such as 2 and 3D navigation mapping, which help drivers to clearly visualise the route they are taking and simple touch screen operation. In addition, clear and accurate voice instructions ensure drivers need never take their eyes off the road. Other features include customisable Points of Interest (POI), which allow drivers to programme their own points of interest or information, such as hotels, museums and petrol stations.

The TomTom HP Navigation Pack with HP iPAQ hx2110 includes:

- Fully-featured HP iPAQ hx2110 PDA
- TomTom's award winning Navigation software and the maps of a country or region pre-installed on SD card
- TomTom wireless Bluetooth™ GPS receiver and charger
- TomTom Holder for the HP iPAQ hx2110

This latest TomTom/HP bundle is available now from major retailers at a recommended retail price of 399 including VAT.
